

The Love of God

I did not have a revelation of the love of God until my pride had been broken, I came to and faced my illusion of power over my life. I had to fall into the loving arms of God and submit to him totally before I heard and understood his love for mankind.

God's love is simple and pure, it is not complex or illusive or hidden, it is open and freely given. God's love is as it has always been since he breathed life into Adam. It is our illusions and trust in other things we find more valuable than God's love, such as Eve.

We all have our distractions and our thirty pieces of silver. God's love is as simple as an outstretched nail scared hand or the touch of the hem of his garment. Only through total Faith and trust in God can we know his love.

It is only through a broken spirit can we see the truth of his Love. Adam had a choice, just as we have a choice in every circumstance or experience in our lives. It is hard not to wonder how God could love us, when we judge ourselves and condemn ourselves through our own understanding.

Instead we should lay our every doubt, sin, or weakness at his feet and walk away with his Love in its place. God's Love is a small still voice and a mighty rushing wind, to speak to our hurt, and blow through our lives until satan can no longer hold on. In God's everlasting love.

David Little